Online Master’s in Health Informatics

Kent State University’s online Master of Science (MS) in Health Informatics (HI) program helps prepare you for a meaningful career that can impact the lives of patients, healthcare providers and administrators within the growing field of health informatics. The increased demand for professionals with comprehensive HI knowledge helps favorably position professionals with a Master’s in HI for success in the current job market.¹

Program at a Glance

Our online Master’s in Health Informatics program is designed to fit into your busy schedule and offers the following features:

- 3 starts per year
- Graduate in as few as 2 years
- 36 credits: 7 required courses, 4 electives and 1 culminating experience
- Courses last 7 weeks, with 2 courses taken sequentially each semester
- Multiple sections of each course are offered per semester to ensure small class sizes
- No GRE requirement for qualified applicants*

*For applicants with an undergraduate GPA of 3.0 or higher (on a 4.0 scale).

Why Study Health Informatics at Kent State?

- Learn from our dedicated faculty of HI practitioners
- Become a subject matter expert in a rapidly expanding field
- Experience the convenience and flexibility of learning online, on your time

Faculty

Kent State is proud to offer a collaborative and rewarding online learning environment that’s brought to you by our esteemed practitioner faculty, who are dedicated to delivering the best possible learning experience to help you advance your HI career.

What You’ll Learn

As the medical industry continues to evolve, new health informatics jobs are emerging that require a unique and specific set of skills. This program helps give you the opportunity to delve into the innovative, technology-driven field that’s reshaping healthcare and to become an in-demand expert in health informatics.